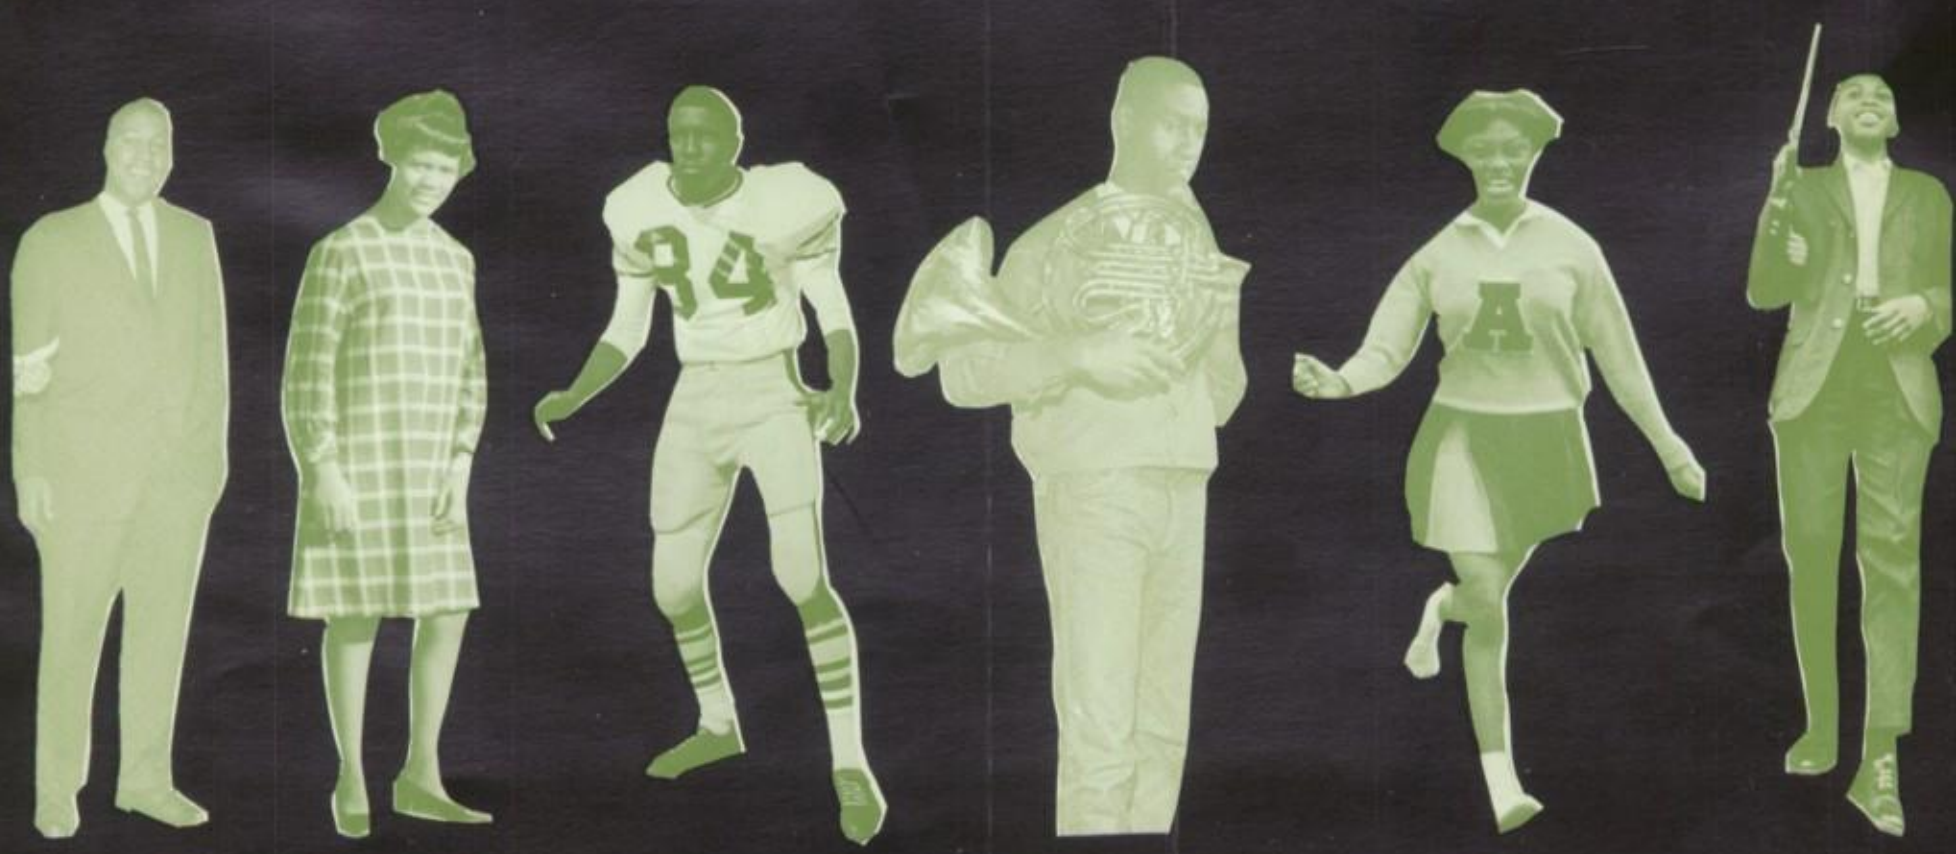
1968 Maroon and Gold



THIS IS

In producing the 1968 Maroon and Gold, the staff chose the color design on the cover to express the theme Involvement. The multicolors and the interweaving of them symbolize the time involved in the diversified phases of school life. Each aspect is separate, distinct, and different; yet each contributes to the total program.

It is the hope of the Maroon and Gold staff that as each page is turned, another memory will be recalled of your involvement at Atkins during 1967-1968.

Dedication

MRS. CURTIS M. SCALES

MR. THOMAS F. POAG

We dedicate this 1968 Maroon and Gold to these people who have dedicated many years to the training and molding of young minds. Mr. Poag, Mr. Wilson, and Mrs. Scales had spent a total of 93 years in public school education before retiring last year. Because of their guidance, their inspirational ideas, their energy, their time donated to the process of preparing students of Atkins High School for a worthwhile life of service outside the school, we seniors of the Class of 1968 are proud to dedicate this book to Mr. E.F. Wilson, Mrs. C.M. Scales, and Mr. T.F. Poag.

Like other departments of the school, the Parent-Teachers Association is completely involved in the total school program. Parents and teachers work in harmony for the betterment of the school. Each year, the organization sponsors a major fund-raising project in order to purchase some needy thing for the school. It also encourages academic excellence by giving monetary awards to high-ranking seniors in the courses and extra curricular activities.

Involvement in Academics

English Department

A sturdy background in English strengthens knowledge in all other courses. English students work for greater comprehension and speed in reading, and endeavor to master grammar, vocabulary, creative writing, and composition. They study the works of the masters through literature.

Journalism students write the news for a forthcoming edition of the Maroon Wave.

In Communications class, students perfect their reading comprehension skills.

Language is the hand which sows the seeds of understanding.

Mary McMillian and Adrian Toney conjugate Spanish verbs in their Spanish class.

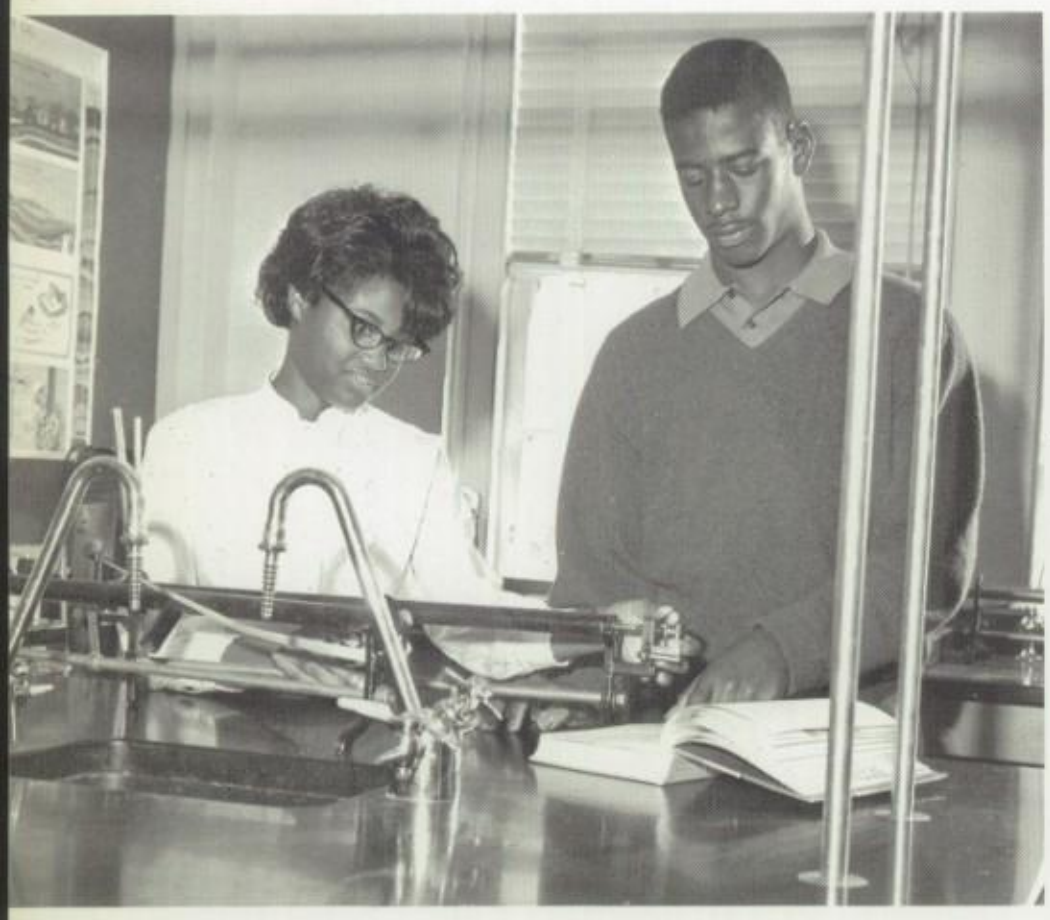
In their foreign language courses, students learn these things: as much as they can about the nature of language—what it is; how languages vary from culture to culture; about another culture through its language; to acquire a new perspective for viewing their own language. A modern language laboratory aids students in promoting adeptness in speaking and comprehending their chosen language.

Students in French III perfect writing skills by taking dictation.

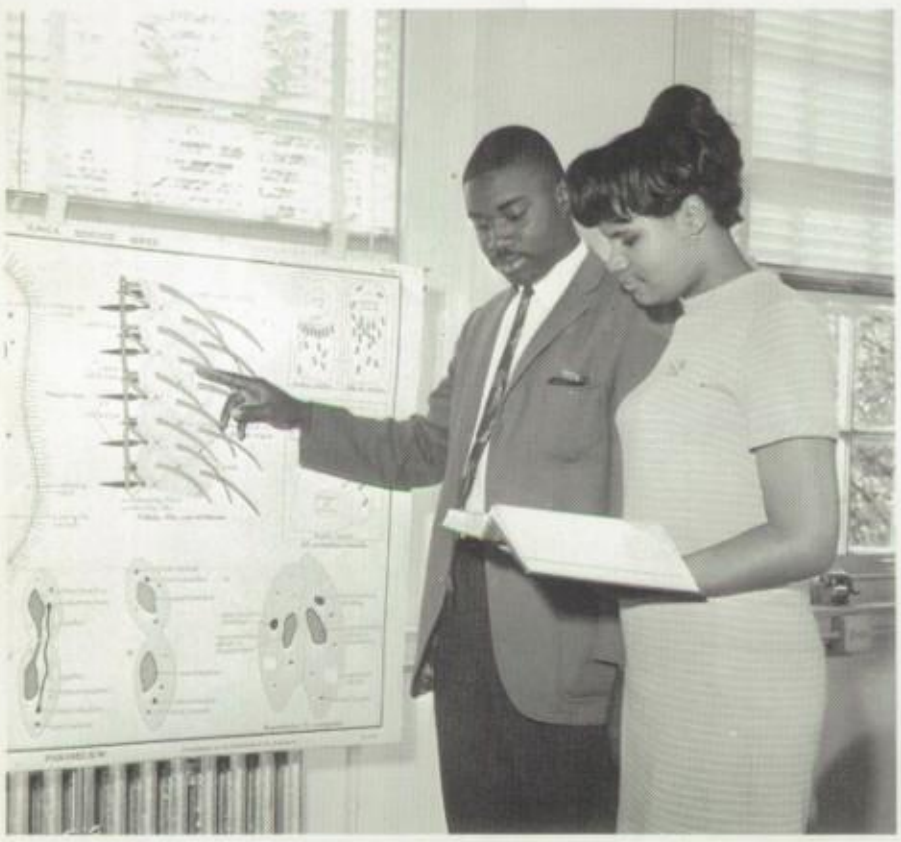
Mythology affords new avenues as a part of the Latin program for Marilyn Ragins and Kedron Reid.

The World of Science is Stimulating

The department of science provides course offerings ranging from the basic fundamentals to advanced programs. Young scientists at Atkins are experimenting with chemicals, and unraveling the perplexing problems of velocities.



Myrna Brake and Steven Wilkins find physics a fascinating subject.



Their biology course holds Sigrid Hauser and Howard Parker enthralled.

Human Anatomy was added to the curriculum this year and lured Linda Odell and Future Williams.

Mathematics Develops Keen Minds

Mathematicians ponder the world of numbers through general math, algebra, geometry, and senior mathematics. The aim of this department is to develop the process of logical thought in students.

Mr. Chambers monitors his students' work in Algebra I Class.

Eddie White and Camille Russell prove a function in analysis class.

Mechanical Drawing, a phase of mathematics, offers Jerry Corpening and Donald Williams training for employment after high school.

Social Studies Department

By studying and analyzing the problems of both past and contemporary cultures, social studies classes play a major role in molding high school students into responsible American citizens. The social studies department is made up of classes in world cultures, American history, European history, Problems of Democracy, sociology, and family living.

Audrey Sheppard and James Miller locate a position on map in World Cultures class.

A picture of the Supreme Court holds the attention of William Hairston and Johnetta Moore in United States History.

A class in family living is one of the courses in social studies.

Physical Education Builds Healthy Bodies and Minds

Outdoor activities prove to be both beneficial and fun for the boys.

Patience and practice build physical prowess in physical education classes.

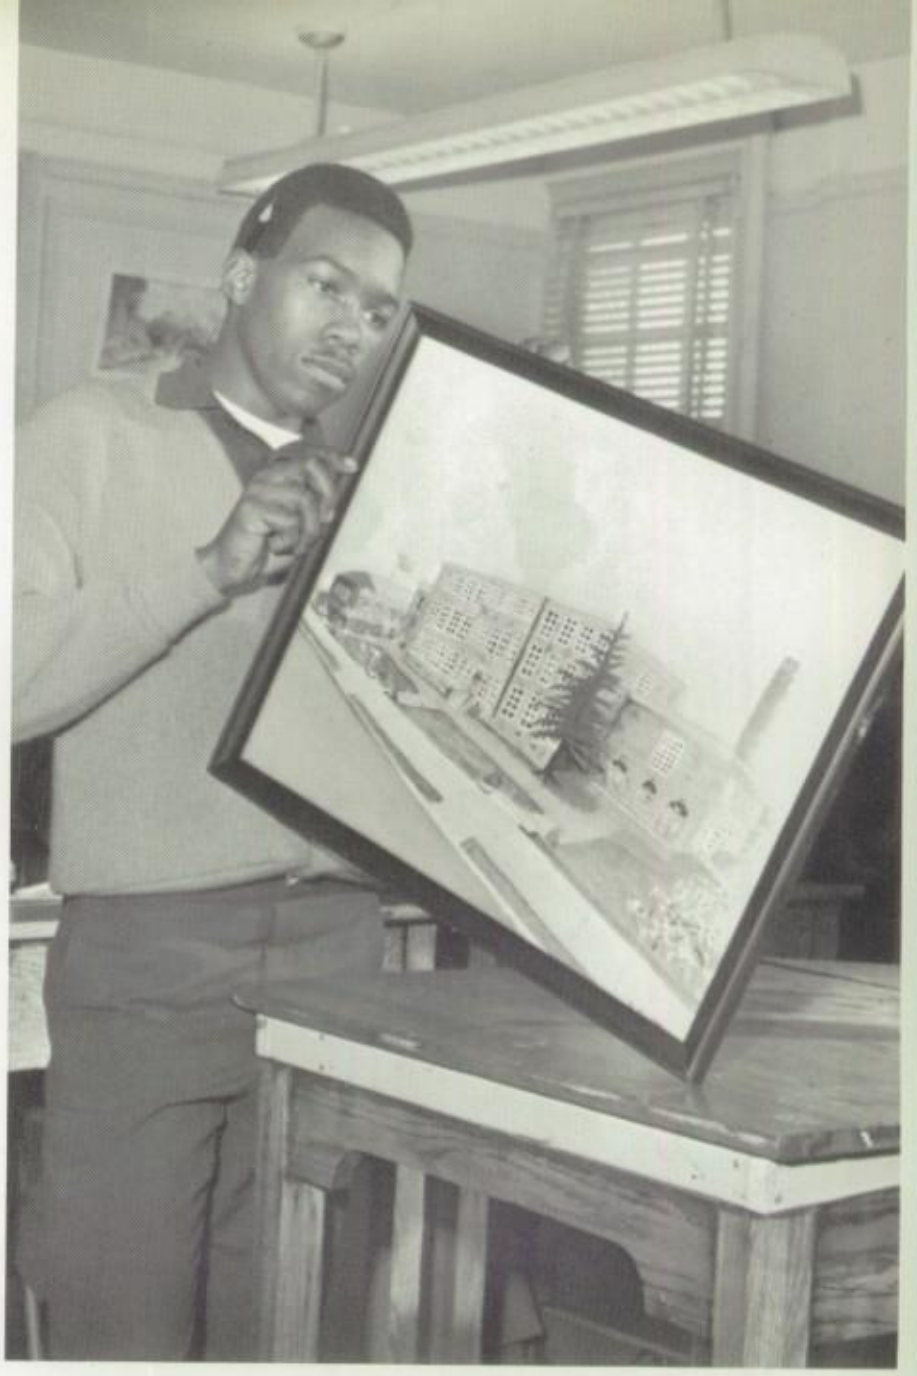
Girls' physical education classes participate in team sports, dancing, and marching.

The aim of boys' physical education classes is to build muscular strength and coordination through volleyball, track, softball, and gymnastics.

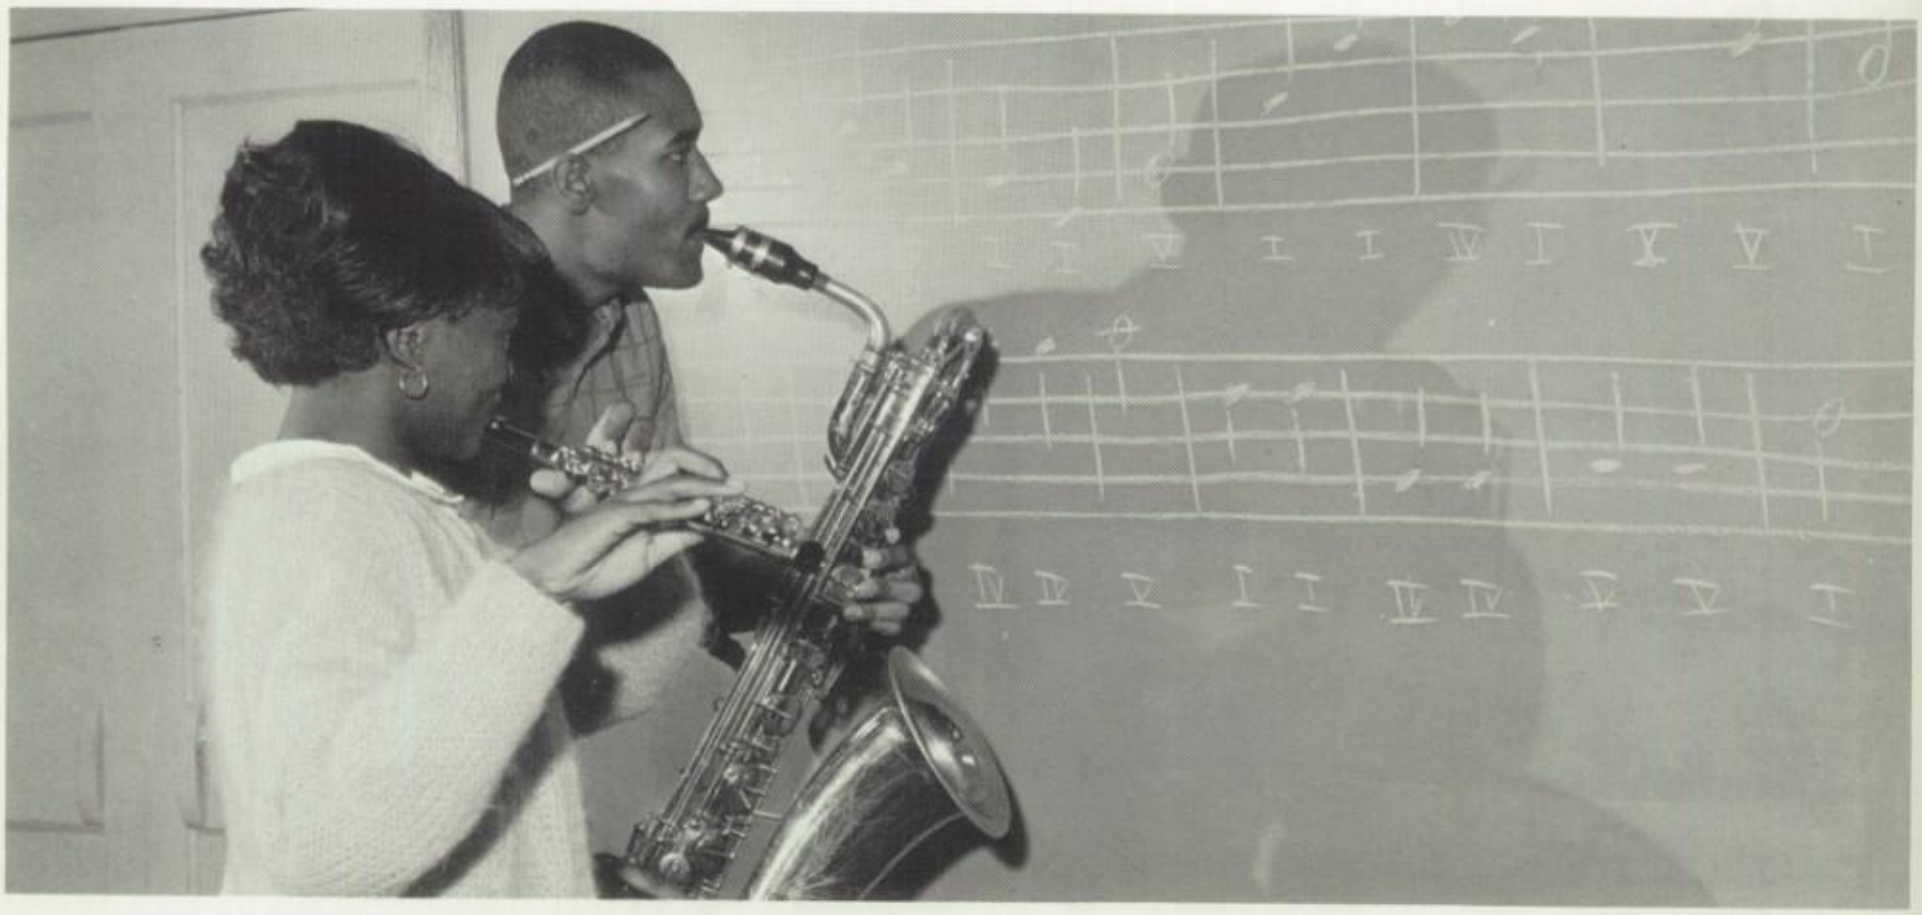
Girls keep fit through regular daily exercise in their physical education classes.

Fine Arts

Students unveil flare for the fine arts through aesthestic courses in art and music. Besides active participation, students find an appreciation of the masters.



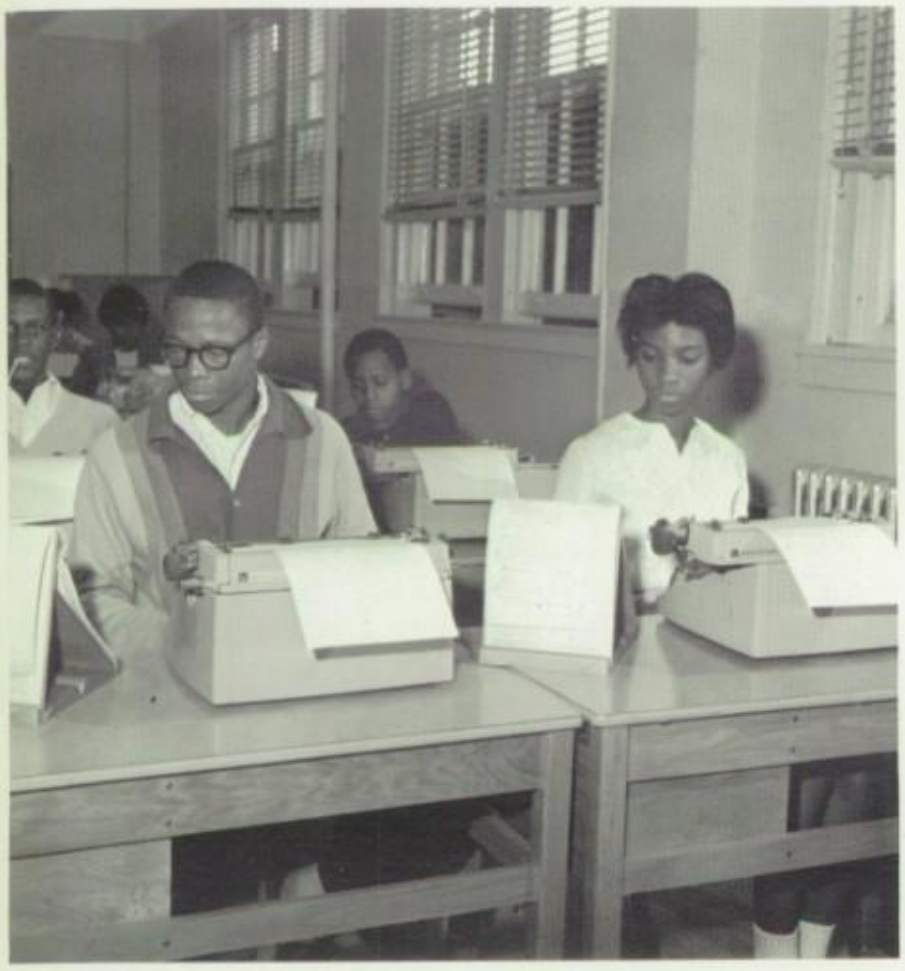
Willie Williams displays a drawing of the school, which he painted for the school office.



Marguerite Timmons and Thomas Hanes practice scales in music class.

Business Education

Preparing for the world of tomorrow, business education students are ably instructed in the fundamentals of business practices. Through valuable knowledge gained in business courses, students leave high school equipped to become secretaries, receptionists, typists, and bookkeepers.



Students in Typing I strive for accuracy and skill. Included in class are Ivory Johnson, Vendetta Hooper, Samuel Moses, Alphonso Abbott, and Pernella Wright.

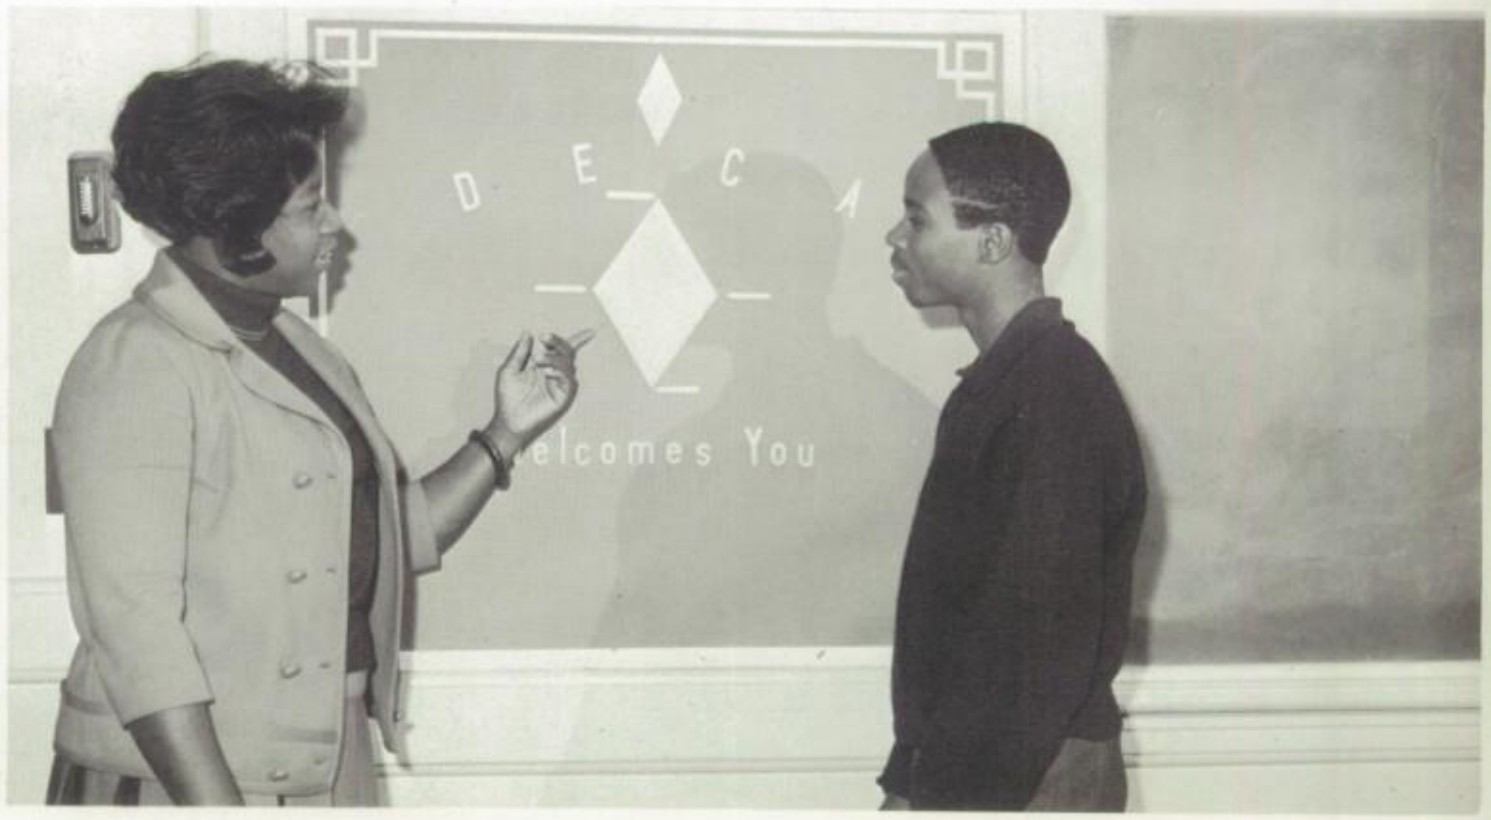
Mrs. Gill dictates material to her shorthand class. These students are preparing for careers in stenography.

Distributive Education

The Distributive Education department provides for a combination of academic learning and work experience. This extended business course offers on-the-job training and develops leadership in the field of marketing and distribution.

D.E. students study advertisement copy as a part of theory. Class is conducted by Mr. Sawyer.

Jeanette Hughes and Herman Bess admire an attractive bulletin board, prepared by the D.E. class.



Vocational Department

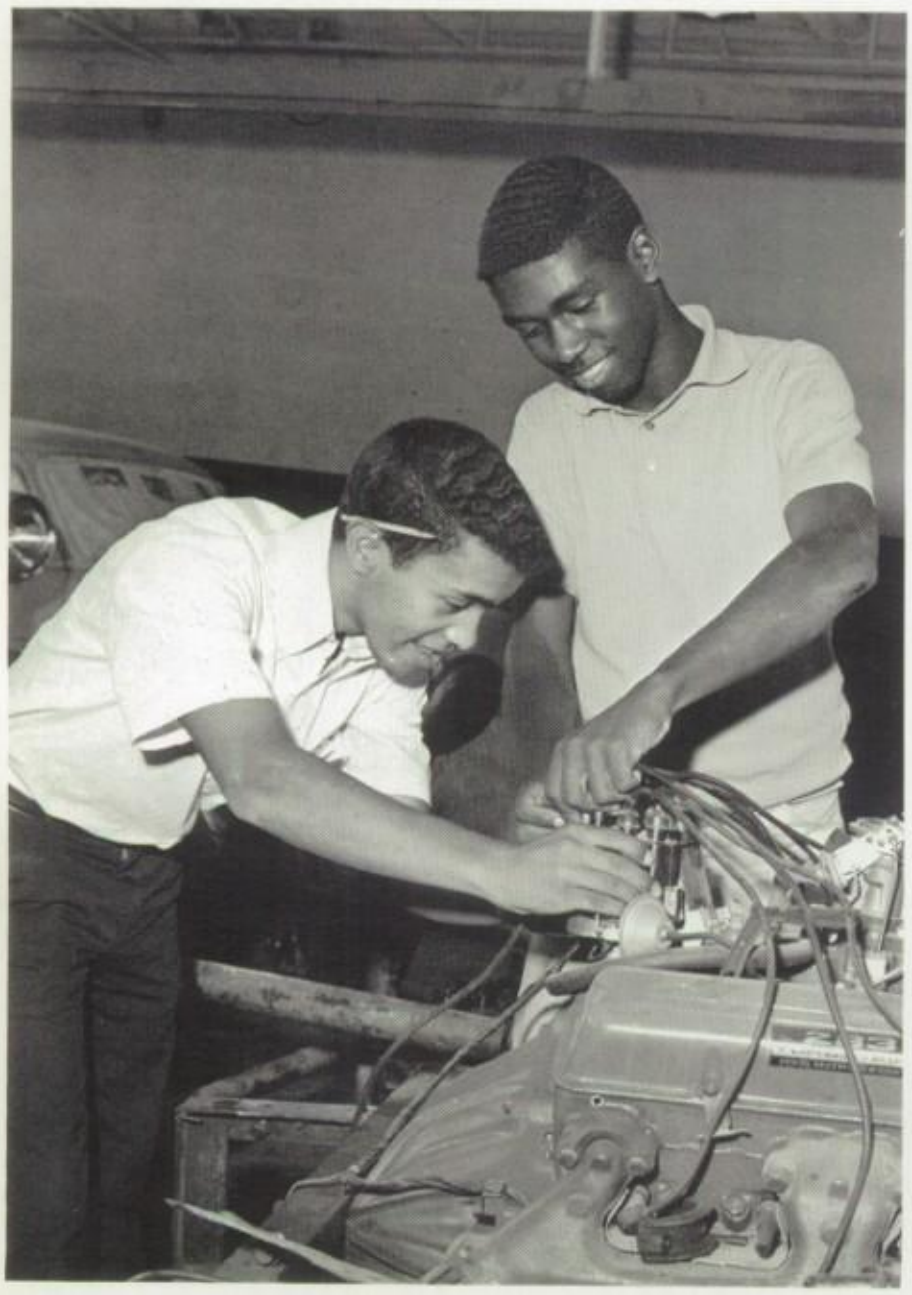
The vocational program develops skilled hands. The practical application of technical abilities opens numerous doors to future job opportunities. Wheels whir in the machine shop, mechanical drawing classes grasp the processes of drafting, future homemakers learn cooking and sewing, paint flies in the painting classes, boys learn the precision of laying bricks in brick masonry, a finished garment brings pride in tailoring, and auto shop students learn auto repair skills in auto mechanics.

Linda Allen invades a boy's world by enrolling in industrial arts with George Barrows.

Brenda Washington, Stella Griffin, Jeanette Jones, Jane DuBose, Lois Canty, and Janie Hentz learn to sew a fine seam in Home Ec.

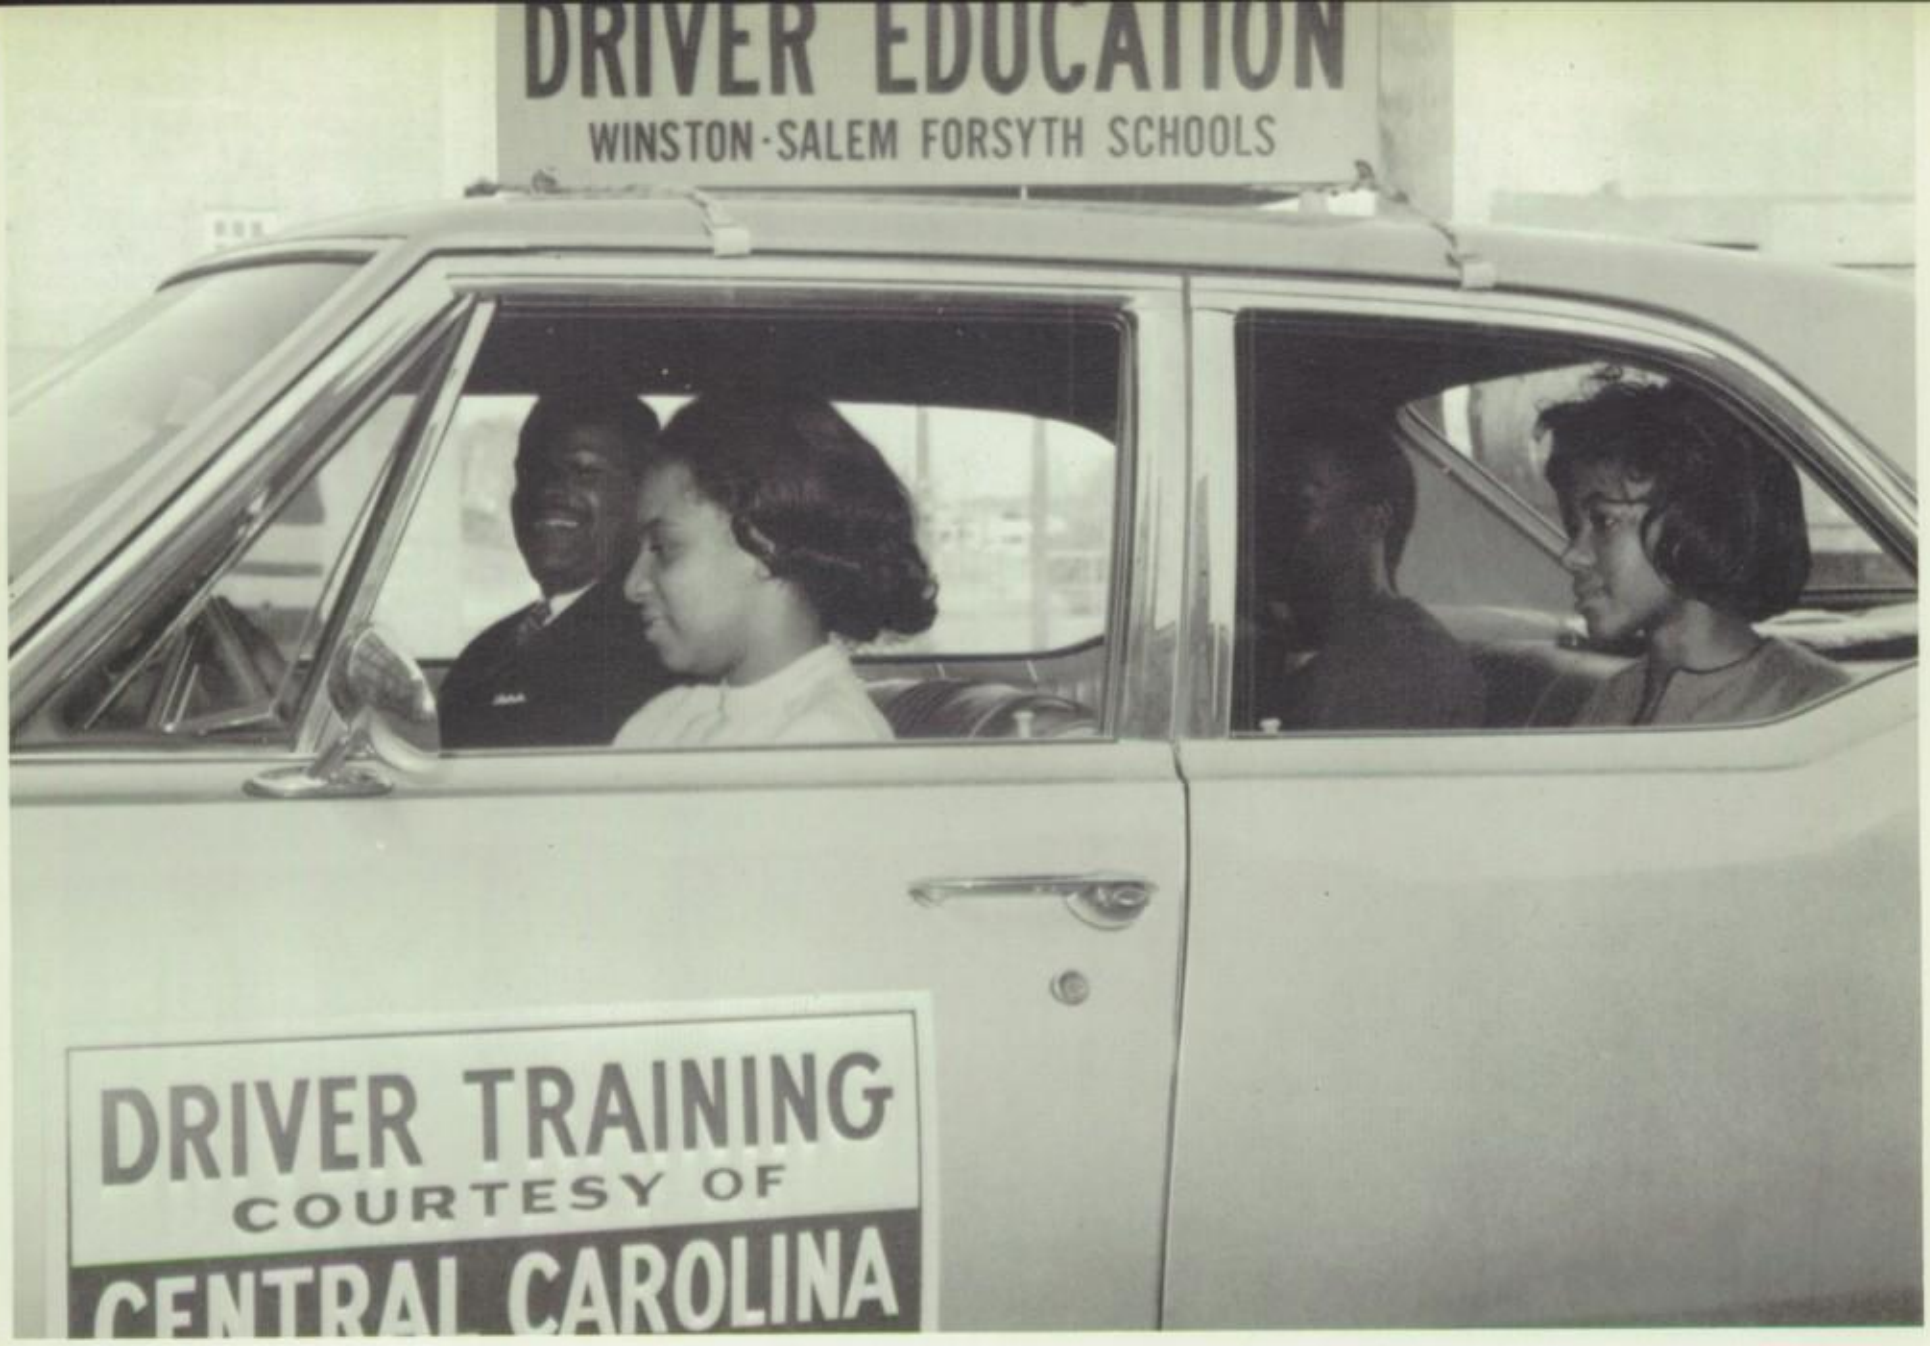
Vocational students learn theory in the classroom and later, they put theory into practice by working on actual projects in the community.

Mary Gore, Phyllis Jeffries, Helen Washington, Iwillis Abernathy pore over pattern and material in tailoring class.



Johnny Little and Reginald Hall find the intricacies of an automobile motor interesting.

Steve Thompkins, G. Williams, and Wendell Brown display their skill in brick-laying.



Driving students Brenda Lineberger and Beatrice Mitchell get in-the-car training under the close supervision of Mr. McGee.

Driver Education . . . Special Services

Aiming toward developing safe and efficient drivers. driver's education classes provide training, theory, simulated mobile units, and Driver's Education in-the-car training.

The library makes available varied materials, books and audio-visual equipment to teachers and students. Thousands of books, periodicals, and clippings fill the space in the library.

The library affords a quiet place for studying for Andrew Yarborough, Oswell Jackson, Ernestine Humphrey, and Charles Patterson.

The pursuit of learning is the primary aim of Atkins' students . . .

Involvement in Activities

Student Government

Instilling school pride is one aim of the Student Council. The group also serves as a mediator between students and administration in an effort to solve problems of the school. Among Council projects was the distribution of Christmas gifts to patients at the Western Carolina Sanatarium at Black Mountain.

Dear Gwen
Take this as your motto for the next two years and we might graduate together
"While sliding down the bannister of success down
let the boys look up under your dress and we might
Graduate together

Dear Gwen
If you don't like my apples don't shake my tree
your man running after me
I'am not running after him
So if you want your man you better keep him buy your side
because if he flags this train down I'm sure gonna let him ride
